The Association on Aging with Developmental Disabilities (AADD) supports and serves aging adults with developmental disabilities to promote their dignity and independence. People, including those with developmental disabilities, are living longer than ever before. With increased life expectancy comes challenges in addressing age-related issues for those with developmental disabilities. AADD strives to meet the growing demand for services addressing the unique needs of individuals with developmental disabilities as they are aging. Visit us at www.agingwithdd.org or at www.facebook.com/agingwithdd.

Not able to attend but still want to donate? Support AADD by donating directly on AADD's website or by using Amazon Smile, Schnucks eScrip, or Giving Assistant.
